Certificate concerning conditions posed by the PhD-scholarship provider

Someone whose funding consists of scholarships may only be admitted to a doctoral programme after it has been ensured that the conditions of the scholarship are justifiable. Justifiable conditions do not put the scholarship holder in a worse position compared to other doctoral students, nor do they infringe on the Faculty of Medicine's right to decide how the education is conducted or examined. Unjustifiable conditions are for example requirements that the scholarship holder has to refund the scholarship or pay penalties in case of failing to perform according to the study plan or failing to obtain the PhD degree. Conditions that could infringe on academic freedoms, such as the freedom of expression, are also considered unjustifiable.
